It's not like I hated the topic of my master's thesis, but I would really like to work on something else in the PhD. Is that even possible?

Role: Master Student

I got stuck writing my master's thesis, there's this one ODE that I can't solve. I'm really scared to ask the professor about something so trivial.

Role: Master Student

My master studies are really great and I absolutely want to continue doing math. But the job perspectives in academia are quite dire, so I don't know if I should start a PhD. And maybe I am not good enough.

Role: Master Student

My master studies are really great and I absolutely want to continue doing math. But at some point I will also want to have kids, and that will be super hard to combine with an academic career.

Role: Master Student

My advisor doesn't grade my thesis but I need the certificate for an internship application.

Role: Master Student

The master program is so much more challenging than my undergrad program. I am wondering whether it was a good idea to enrol in it. How will it be when I finally start with the masters' thesis?

Role: Master Student

Which professor should I ask to supervise my master's thesis?

Role: Master Student

I am too stupid for doing a PhD, that's only for super brains.

Role: Master Student

Am I good enough for a PhD program? What are even the requirements?

Role: Master Student

Do I need to decide between having a family and a career or can I have both?
